

Curriculum Vitae - Liz Scholey (Lanchbery)

Following a highly successful senior HR career, in two major areas of the public sector, the NHS and Higher Education, Liz has been developing a portfolio career involving consultancy in a range of management issues, teaching and creative development.

She has worked at Director level for almost 30 years latterly as Personnel Director at Kingston University, and has particularly demonstrated her commitment to equality both within the University and nationally through involvement in the Athena Project, promoting women in science and engineering, and membership of the Board of the Kingston Race Equality Council.

A skilled coach and mentor with experience of working inside and outside her organisation, Liz has extensive experience and expertise in resolving disputes and grievances and has obtained the Certificate in Workplace Mediation.

Liz is also a highly qualified dance teacher and teaches dance alongside her consultancy work. She has been working on using music and dance in personal and team development, which is proving a very effective development tool.
